For a youth who was demoted for inefficiency, Grand Duke Nicholas continues to do fairly well.

Whatever their mothers may have raised them to be, a good many guardsmen's wives don't want them to be soldiers.

Now if the Irish sufferers had only had the foresight to move to Belgium or Poland, the matter of their relief could be arranged nicely.

Although he hasn't said anything about it, Grand Duke Nicholas may have an idea of eating his Christmas dinner in Constantinople.

Incidentally, things have changed remarkably in the Colorado Supreme Court when that body takes a fall out of the chief corporation of the state.

Looking back through the light of blacklists and other things, what a lot of duffers they must have been in 1776 to kick about a few taxes Britain wanted to impose.

A WORD ABOUT THE WEATHER

From the indefinite date of the Noachic flood, far on through the ages of immortal poets, the visionary factors of the undying classics, what is called "the weather" has been a matter of daily mention by king and clown, by priest and peasant. No great poet has been written, no great play created from the "Hud" of Homer to the "Tempest" of Shakespeare, without tribute to the elements, and from day to day in all lands and in all tongues "the weather" is a matter of momentary comment.

Never was this topic more in evidence in the United States than in this passing day of grace. We are eizzling without benefit of the clergy, and assuredly without benefit of the weather man, that magnificent production of modern science who tells what is going to happen when it has already happened, or which is traveling blither away from some other spot, for of the weather seat of war. The profoundest scientific thing in the world is to announce a prognosis of the thing that is evident.

Instead of telling us that the passing of the equinox is due to a "Burmese high" and instead of informing us in brief and good set terms that there is a "high" or a "low" in various regions of the terrestrial lines, why does not the long suffering public have information in simple language, from the infinite wisdom of expensive statement as to the why and wherefore of the highs and lows. We all know of it after it happens. It needs no weather Daniel come to judgment to tell us that, but we demand, when we are paying for it, that we shall know the reasons, the beginnings, whether they

HEADACHES

Thousands of men and women suffer from headaches every day, other thousands have headaches every week or every month, and still others have occasional headaches, but not at regular intervals. The best doctor is often unable to find the cause of many of these headaches, and himself other cases, knowing the cause, he does not know what to do to give a permanent cure. All he can do is to prescribe the usual pain relievers, which give temporary relief, but the headache returns as usual, and treatment is again necessary. If you suffer from headaches, no matter what their nature, take anti-kennel tablets, and the results will be satisfactory in the shortest time. You can obtain them at all druggists in any quantity, the world's best value for money. Ask for A-K Tablets.

SICK-HEADACHES

Rick-headache, the most miserable of all sicknesses, loses its terror when A-K Tablets are taken. When you feel an attack coming on take two tablets, and in many cases, the attack will be stopped. During an attack take one A-K Tablet every two hours. The rest and comfort which follow, can be obtained in no other way. Genuine A-K Tablets bear the K monogram. At all druggists.

happen in Texas or Timbuctoo, where and why the meteorological dainties heile and pursue their mystical pranks. Is science a science, or is it a play of a reincarnation of Gagliostro? Let us not be told the known, which is known by the very play and chicken before it is known to the weather bureau, but let us know exactly why and wherefore.

STRIKE MUST BE AVERTED.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: The railway managers have just refused the demands of the employees for an eight-hour day and time and a half for overtime work.

The employees contend that the overtime provision is intended as a penalty rather than as a means of increasing pay.

The railways insist that it would increase pay rolls beyond their capacity to pay, with their rates fixed as they now are by state and interstate authority.

Which side is right there is no practicable way of determining, under our laws.

The railways propose arbitration, offering the submission of the dispute to the interstate commerce commission as an alternative.

The representatives of the employees reject the arbitration proposal and deny the power of the interstate commerce commission.

They will submit the question of striking by referendum, which may require five weeks to complete.

The public is as vitally interested in the situation as the railways or the employees.

A strike would tie up our transportation system and paralyze industry and commerce.

It would bring untold suffering, even if riot and bloodshed were avoided.

It would take at least months and perhaps years for the employees to recover from the time lost in a strike.

The public never would recover its losses.

Some way of averting the strike should be devised.

The interstate commerce commission may not have the legal authority to hear the case and, of course, it has no power to settle the dispute. There is no other body, however, that could ascertain the merits of the controversy with greater certainty and such disinterestedness.

Congress might well direct it to hear the controversy and report a finding of facts.

"VITAMINES" ON DEUTSCHLAND?

The fact that the only fresh food that the famous German undertaker, Herr Deutschland, carried on its recent pioneering voyage to America was oranges and lemons, may have a bearing on some recent experiments in food values that may change the diet of the world.

Noted scientists, among them eminent Germans, have practically established the fact that certain food substances called "vitamines" are not only necessary to life and the proper development of the body cells, but also serve to prevent diseases due to mal-nutrition.

It has been shown that several of the staple foods of today, because of the modern methods used in preparing them for the market, are entirely lacking in vitamins, but that oranges and lemons are plentifully supplied with vitamins of a very hardy type.

It is said oranges and lemons were chosen for the Deutschland's officers and crew to balance the diet and supply the healthful, live freshness of these fruit juices.

Experiments with animals of several kinds have proved that the juices of certain fresh fruits and vegetables contain revivifying properties. On certain diets, lacking the juices the animals have died. Other animals about to die for the lack of this peculiar "substance" have immediately returned to normal on the injection of the juice.

A box of Sunkist oranges and a box of Sunlit lemons was presented to the captain and crew of the famous U-boat for the return trip.

HOW CORA AND DAVID TEMPLE SOLVED THEIR MARITAL PROBLEMS.

By ZOR BECKLEY.

LOVE—AND LIFE.

It was Wanda and not David who first found actual words for the situation into which their moment of passion had plunged them. And Wanda, woman of deep insight that she was, put David's case better even than he could have done.

"Davy, dear," she said as they drew apart, awakened to the serious—may, tragic—problem before them. "Some day once said that woman's love begins where man's love ends. I never knew quite what that meant till this moment, but now I know. Man's love flares into passion and clamors for fulfillment. It does not reason. It does not ask to serve. It brooks no arguments, foresees no results."

"Woman's love, on the other hand, takes small account of what man so ardently desires. Woman's love thinks it long to give real and lasting service—not the mere gratification of the hour. Woman's love endures waiting and hardship and sacrifice and disappointment. Woman's love is constructive where man's destroys. Woman's protective; man's ruthless. You may not understand all this, Davy, but believe it nevertheless."

He moved swiftly toward her. Would have taken her in his arms again, manlike, soothing her troubled spirit with the narcotic of caresses. Swiftly she moved away.

"No, my dear, that only proves I am right. Listen, Davy: Let us search this feeling of ours in the light of reason. Suppose we admit we—we greatly care for each other. You loved me once long ago. I told you I did not wish to marry. That I was a gypsy, a wanderer. That I could not be tied.

"You suffered a while and then you loved again, a fine, sweet, wholesome woman, who has made you a splendid wife—a woman you truly love, my friend. You love Cora, do you not? Answer me honestly, David, with your heart stripped clean of all pretense, all passion."

"Yes, Wanda, I do love Cora. But when I—"

"Enough! I know what you would say. I have heard it all before. A man loves his wife, but his senses vibrate to the chord some other woman strikes. It is life, David. It is love. But it is another form of love no better, only different, and far more fleeting."

She paused for an instant, watching him with a little tremor of the lips, as a woman sometimes looks at a child in a fever, suffering, helpless. She went on before he had a chance to speak in denial:

"Stop and think a moment, David. Cora dearly loves you. She is in every way splendid, suited to you, sympathetic, understanding, ambitious and capable."

"Yes, she is all of that," broke in David, earnestly.

"Is it worth hating such a woman then, Davy, for a period of madness? For it would be only that. In the long run, friend, you and I would not be good running mates. There is more to life, Davy, than just love. Life means service. Service means usefulness, good wearing qualities, home, children. There are more in Cora's giving than in mine."

He had wanted to interrupt her, but her even compelling tones held him back. He realized as never before the fact that this will really afford them any pleasure, or whether it will prove quite the opposite, but as yet, I have had no complaint of poor sleep as a result of my rambles. Recently Edna Goodrich and Lenore Ulrich were guests at my home, and when I suggested a rarebit, one looked at the other in doubt. "I must positively appear at the studio tomorrow morning for a big scene in 'The Intrigue,'" smiled pretty Lenore. However, they both had enough courage to try it. They were both at the studio bright and early the next morning and greeted me with smiles. Since then they have both had occasion to suggest one of my rarebits as an evening's titbit. In lieu of this and other similar cases, I feel that I am not encouraging the sale of sleeping powders by offering you my recipe, as follows:

Grate four ounces of dry cheese and mix with five ounces of grated bread. The yolks of two eggs are then stirred in and three ounces of butter added. This is beaten together and a teaspoonful of mustard, a few pinches of salt and a little pepper added. Slices of bread are toasted and the outside crust is removed. The paste is spread thick upon the toast and placed in the oven until slightly browned. It is served steaming hot.

Often of an evening when I have a few visitors I make up a Welsh Rarebit as part of the evening's pleasures. Once in a while one of my friends will at first question low fine she was, how loyal—and how light.

When they parted that evening he missed her again. But it was the seat of a love out of which had passed one moment.

Why Endure Summer Colds? It isn't necessary to have a stuffed head, running nose. To cough your head off as it were. All you need do is to use Dr. Hoff's Fine-Tar-Liniment. The soothing and healing balsams open the clogged air passages and in a short time you get relief and start on the road to recovery. Your nose stops running, you cough less and you know you are getting better. Get a bottle, use as directed. Keep what is left as a cough and cold insurance.

MPHEETERS TELLS OF CLUB WORK

The Pleasant Hill Boys and Girls club held a club rally July 27th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Purviance, south of Guthrie. Miss Emma Chandler, state agent of the girls' club work, was present and took charge of the girls, giving demonstrations on how to can the different vegetables and fruits in the most economical way for home use. County Agent McPheters took charge of the boys, holding a number of field meetings and visiting the plots of the different members, showing the boys how to select their seed, the importance of selecting the best culture methods and the preparation of their exhibits for the fair. The club boys also took up the vaccinating of cattle for black leg, vaccinating a number of cattle for Mr. Purviance for the experience.

A delicious dinner was served by the ladies which was enjoyed by every one. The latter part of the afternoon was devoted to amusements of various kinds which was participated in and enjoyed by all.

The second rally was held the 28th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Patterson by the boys and girls of Rock Mount district. Practically the same work was taken up at this meeting. Miss Chandler had charge of the girls work. Mr. A. J. Farquharson, former agent, took charge of the boys work, owing to the absence of Agent McPheters who had a very urgent call and could not be present.

A delicious dinner was served at the home of Mrs. Patterson and enjoyed by all. The social side of this meeting was not neglected and every one enjoyed the social events. Very truly yours, A. A. McPheters, County Agent.

Should Sloan's Liniment Go Along? Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's Liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, headache, stings, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment.

Write one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PIGS SHOW WHAT THEY KNOW

"Now, Snips, the little Gnome," said Daddy, "was getting along splendidly with the Pig School he had started, and he had invited the Fairies to come to the fine exhibition of knowledge and learning the Pigs were planning to give."

"All the Fairies, led by the Fairy Queen, went to the old hollow tree where Snips held School, and there they saw the Pigs sitting alongside the tree, waiting for their teacher."

"Snips, to come and ask their questions."

"They all had their stone slates and their sharp stone pencils, and were practicing their letters every little while. They were writing beautiful big P's, for their family name, more often than any other letter."

"Right on time came Snips. He was wearing a tall green hat and green spectacles on his nose, which very much amused the Fairies."

"They thought that his costume was rather gay for a School Teacher, but Snips had the idea that he must impress the Pigs with cleanliness and attractiveness—for, as he so truly said, they would just as soon wear tall hats and tall boots of mud!"

"As for the Fairies, they came dressed in soft gray dresses with gray wings, and silver gray wands. They had said they wanted to look like little School Fairies."

"Soon Snips began his teaching. All the little Pigs stood up and recited in chorus the many wise things Snips had taught them—all about how clean and neat they should be in order to be thought well of—and to give people a different idea than that the very name of Pig meant dirt and mud."

"Then the Pigs sang their school song."

"I never heard of a Pig singing, Daddy," said Nancy.

"Snips called it singing to encourage them. But they called it the 'Pigs' Rhapsody Orchestra.' For, do you know that those little Pigs had become so vain and proud of themselves since they had been going to Snips' School that they thought their squeals were every bit as good as some music they had heard of called 'Rhapsodies'?"

"And after that Peter Pink Pig got up and with a very low bow he said that they would all give their one act play for the benefit of the Fairies, and in honor of their Teacher, Snips."

"Another Pig waved a big, leafy branch before the Fairies so that for a few minutes they could not see what was going on. Then the Pig stopped waving his branch, and all the Pigs came forth on a little stage made of moss. They acted a very funny play called 'Ham or No Ham.' Of course they made 'Ham' the villain of the play, and 'No Ham' was the hero—the very finest Pig in the School. And they acted in such a funny way that the Fairies were laughing almost every moment—until towards the end of the play they wept because Ham, the villain, won, which meant that the little Pigs had been killed, and big folks had had ham for dinner. The Fairies were almost heartbroken over the ending. They were afraid that Snips had taught the Pigs too much, when along came the Mothers and Daddies of the Pigs in the School. They wore mud shoes and stockings and mud patches all over. They heard just the end of the play, and they said, 'It is fine to see the Pigs know so much, but they must fatten up and be lazy. We have such a happy life, and if in the end we're seized by the villain, why should we care?' And the Fairies laughed and said:

"All kinds of Pigs make up the Pig world, too. It seems—anyway, we've seen a very unusual play!"
